GHP@60 and Global Health Week

The Department of Global Health and Population will celebrate the 60th anniversary of its founding and relaunch Global Health Week in March 2023, featuring a symposium on global health security (Tuesday, March 28, 2023, 2pm). Current Harvard students and postdoctoral fellows are invited to submit poster presentation on global health and population studies. We particularly encourage submissions in the area of global health security; however, we strongly encourage submissions from many different disciplines and schools at Harvard University.

The poster session is designed to extend opportunities for Harvard graduate students and postdocs to present their latest scientific findings and community engagement activities to the greater School, University, and global health community.
